MCMC STATEMENT

CYBERJAYA, 16 January 2014 --- Sheikh Raffie Abdul Rahman, Senior Director, Strategic Communication, The Malaysian Communications and Multimedia Commission, said:

“The Malaysian Communications and Multimedia Commission (MCMC), the industry regulator, has not blocked nor instructed any internet service providers in Malaysia to block the BBC’s online report.

“Based on our initial assessment, the report was accessible to users of the internet. We understand that there could have been some temporary difficulties in accessing it, but at the time of this statement this disruption has been resolved. Furthermore, we have not received any official complaint from the public regarding difficulty in accessing the report.

“We would also like to refute earlier reports in the media that misquoted MCMC as saying that “various Malaysian service providers could have acted on their own accord”. This misreporting is a serious matter.

“MCMC understands the benefits of the internet and social media well and we continue to work to improve broadband access to the Malaysian people.

“Malaysia’s online environment is free and is one of the most robust and critical in the world. MCMC and the Malaysian government are committed to ensuring our online media remains vibrant. We have always promoted self-regulation and responsibility by internet users rather than using the law.”
